NINETEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF CONTRIBUTORS.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 3D, 1871.

At a meeting of the contributors to the Hospital of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, held this day, pursuant to the Charter, at the office, 708 Walnut Street, Dr. CASPAR MORRIS was called to the Chair, and the Rev. JOHN A. CHILDS, D.D., was appointed Secretary.

The Report of the Board of Managers, together with the annual statements and accounts, was then presented; when

On motion, it was

RESOLVED, That the Report and accompanying documents be referred to the Board of Managers, to be published in part or in whole, at their discretion.

The following gentlemen, having been nominated, were unanimously elected members of the Board, to serve for the ensuing three years, viz:

REV. H. J. MORTON, D.D.,
REV. D. S. MILLER, D.D.,
CASPAR MORRIS, M.D.,
GEORGE M. STROUD,

JOHN A. CHILDS, SECRETARY.

NINETEENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE
Hospital of the Prot. Episcopal Church
IN PHILADELPHIA.

TO THE CONTRIBUTORS :

Once more permitted to render an account of their stewardship to the Contributors, the Managers of the Hospital submit their Annual Report.

They present it under a deep sense of their responsibility, and of gratitude, to the Divine Master who has so graciously prospered our Institution in its steadily increasing usefulness and influence.

We have reason for congratulation in the general condition of the Hospital, as well as in some of the arrangements and improvements which have been recently effected ; and, among other sources of encouragement, there is especial reason for gratification in the timely and handsome contributions.

Still, we cannot pretend to regard the progress of the year just closed as all that it might have been in order to secure the most satisfactory prospect for the year to come.

The wards have been constantly full, and the demand from all parts of a now populous neighborhood, and from more distant portions of our City, is continually increasing; yet there is no promise of the early erection of the wing and corridor, to complete the Hospital, and thus double its capacity. Nor, we must admit, is there any ground for expecting an increase of the endowment fund that would justify so large an accession to our present household without the risk of an annual deficit, which threatens us even with the present number of patients. We are confident, however, that the completion of the second wing, with its spacious wards and rooms and corridors, would soon lead to adequate endowment, or at least to the requisite amount of annual contributions. But, granting the contingency of insufficient means—which we are scarcely willing to consider in a question of humanity pointing so strongly in the opposite direction—the addition of the missing wing and corridor would be a great advantage, in many respects, to the patients and officers already in the house. It would be, above all, desirable in affording an admirable array of new wards and rooms for use in Summer, and especially in alternation with the old ones.

This opportunity for removing the inmates from one part of the Hospital to another would, of itself, effect a great amount of positive good, by lessening epidemic tendencies, improving the general health, and shortening the duration of treatment. It would thus add, without increased expense, to the number of patients treated in the same number of beds, through the more frequent discharges and admissions. In fact, the hygienic influence of alternating occupancy of the wards, one set being vacated and purified, while the other is inhabited for a season, has been proved to be so beneficial that extra wards and separate pavilions, for this particular purpose, are becoming common among the great hospitals abroad. Sooner or later, under the now prevalent ideas in regard to the evils of large hospital populations, the principle of occasional alternation of this kind will be regarded as imperative, even on the smaller scale of the two hundred and fifty beds of our ultimate establishment. It is a measure of so much value, even when applied to smaller numbers, that no better use could be devised for our eastern pavilion than this kind of substitution. Such facility for purification might well reconcile us to a much longer period of waiting, for the power to fill the Hospital complement of beds, than is likely to be left us when the finished house shall have become the standing invitation to the charitable which is confidently expected.

Nine hundred and sixty (960) patients have been admitted in the course of the year ; of whom seven hundred and twenty-four (724) were men, two hundred and thirty-six (236) were women, and one hundred and twelve (112) were under eighteen years of age. The daily average number of patients of all kinds in the Hospital was (105) one hundred and five ; and the average stay of these patients in the wards was (40.2) about forty days. The whole number of patients in the year was lessened by the necessity for accommodating the chronic (chest disease) cases of the Hannah Ward, and those under the foundation for incurables. Until the eastern wing is in operation, these comparatively permanent occupants of beds, although legitimate subjects of the Hospital bounty, must keep out many transient and acute cases, and thus obtain an excessive share of the benefits of the present limited endowment. For the same reason (that is, want of room) the number of women and children is lamentably small in proportion to the number of men. There is no lack of applicants among these often needy and always interesting classes ; and yet they are confined to side rooms and an attic story, instead of being allowed a range at least as free for the two together as, with the exception of the few inmates of the Hannah Ward, there is for the men alone. Women and children may seem less important to the community than men as the sustainers of their families, and less exposed than men to disease and injury—a general rule to which hospital experience affords numerous exceptions even as to children; but they are none the less entitled, and certainly not less susceptible, to proper hospital benefits. Indeed, without regard to natural sentiment, the right is on their side, so far as all the superior advantages to be derived from the purer air, more healthful exercise and the various accompaniments and surroundings of a separate wing may be concerned. We think so, because we cannot forget the more delicate natures and domestic inclinations, which must render such attractions far more beneficial in their influence on them than on the ruder frames and spirits of the artisans and laborers, who necessarily monopolize the principal wards of the present wing.

The unusual average duration of treatment is another effect of the disproportion, in our small hospital family, between the numbers of acute and chronic cases, which is due as much to the absence of extended accommodations (that is, of the second wing) as to the actual number of incurables and

Hannah Ward patients, since a larger population would reduce it. This duration of treatment has risen from under thirty to a little over forty days, and shows an average stay in the House, which, in the small daily ward population of one hundred and five, is entirely too long for a general hospital.

The whole number of all classes of out-patients treated in the Dispensary was seven thousand three hundred and forty-three (7343), the daily average being about seventy. The proportion of women and children was so much larger than that of men as to indicate distinctly what might be done in the wards for the alleviation of suffering among these more feeble and dependent objects of sympathy, were it in our power, through the fulfilment of the contemplated plan in the erection of another wing.

A greater number than hitherto of out-patients have been received at the Dispensary. This is due, in a growing artisan population, to various obvious causes, including the more general reputation of the Hospital; and it is likely to increase on a much larger scale. The crowd of dispensary applicants has gradually become so great, and the character of the service has grown so much more important, through the necessary exclusion of minor cases from the wards, that a re-organization of the department has been finally determined upon as a matter of necessity.

For this purpose two additional resident physicians were appointed, and the original provision of the charter (the action of which had been suspended), was resorted to for the election of an associate staff, of four assistant physicians and four assistant surgeons, to take charge of the Dispensary service. The wards are in this manner relieved of a class of cases (especially the surgical,) involving serious responsibility, and yet not ill enough to justify admission to the house; and these cases are provided with attendance of a high character at very much less cost; while an interesting and instructive field of practice is brought within the scope of an additional corps of well trained practitioners. This Dispensary staff was organized and at work in the month of May; and has since then performed its duty, with zeal and efficiency, to the great advantage of the whole institution.

Another arrangement from which a beneficial result is expected, is the appointment of the matron to the general supervision of the nursing. In this office she is regarded as the successor of the lady who held the post, as a volunteer, but was obliged to withdraw her valuable co-operation on account of domestic obligations. Mrs. Knisel was too closely involved in the ordinary household cares as matron, to have the time to spare for the more important work which her predecessor had so well performed. Although she was already invested by law with the requisite authority, this had been made available and sufficient for the purpose, only by the lady supervisor, acting as her deputy; and, with the withdrawal of the latter from the service, it had practically failed. The need of a competent and active oversight, under specific regulation, of the whole nursing department had become so apparent, and yet so difficult to provide for, that it was thought best to give Mrs. Knisel an assistant for the minor duties, and thus enable her to devote herself more fully to the higher office. Having held for some years the most responsible administrative position, except that of Superintendent, she had long since proved her capacity and worth. Being not only fitted for the charge by ripe experience and superior character, she was especially desirable because, as a resident officer, her home was already established, where that of a supervisor ought to be, in the midst of her official work.

Early in the year the children's ward was endowed, by donation of two thousand dollars from Mrs. J. I. Clark Hare, with a memorial bed, in memory of a deceased child, John Innis Clark Hare, Jr. An appropriate inscription, on the wall at the head of one of the children's beds, records the offering, and its touching motive in a Christian mother's love; thus tenderly suggesting a graceful and ever active form of charity, to others under similar bereavement.

A tribute of another character, to be acknowledged with sadness from a cherished benefactor who has gone to her rest, is a legacy of ten thousand dollars bequeathed, also for the support of beds, by the late Mrs. William Bucknell.

The largest donation of the year is that of eighteen thousand dollars to balance the construction account of the Committee of Arrangements and Building. Coming from the chairman of that committee, who is well known to be as much opposed to being made the subject of formal public acknowledgments for his good deeds as he is prodigal of his labor, time, ability, and means in serving the Hospital, we do not venture to go beyond this mention of his latest contribution to the building fund. It is presented as the simple record of a fact which was already too widely known to be passed without the customary notice.

The most expensive of the improvements, paid for in this manner, are a neat and substantial picket fence around the Hospital enclosure, and a high and very effective chimney shaft, which was required for the steam boiler furnace employed in warming the Hospital. Other expenses have been incurred—and similarly liquidated without draft upon the Hospital resources—in the very tasteful painting of the walls of the operating amphitheatre, the resident's and the private patients' rooms of the centre. This is in the style of waterproof coloring of the centre hall, the superintendent's and the apothecary's offices, already so well done through special contributions, in previous years. It is so gratifying to the eye, and so decidedly sanitary in its influence, that an equally protective and beautiful covering is much to be desired for the walls of the wards, corridors, and other rooms of the occupied wing. We take pleasure, therefore, in announcing the promise, on the part of two of our Managers, to undertake the painting of the walls of the dining rooms and reception rooms of this wing; and shall be very glad to receive other friendly offers of the same kind in the course of the ensuing year.

There is one expense in prospect (for the grading and paving of the two adjoining streets), which has been apprehended and postponed until the growth of our city has rendered it imperative. This will subject us to a liability of not less than fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000)—an amount at present wholly beyond our reach without invasion of vested capital which should be held inviolate. It must be expressly understood that this new and heavy draft upon the Hospital treasury is only to be met through special contributions. We have nothing to depend upon except that hitherto unfailing source, the benevolence of sterling friends, to whose intervention in times of need we have so often looked, under an ever merciful Providence, with a confidence that has never been misplaced.

The completion of the highways around the grounds will be advantageous in many obvious respects. Huntingdon Street on the south is already lined with neat three-story brick dwelling houses, interspersed with shops, along the rear of the Hospital structure. It is intersected at right angles by three smaller streets, which are lined with double rows of equally neat but smaller houses. On the north side Lehigh Avenue, one hundred and twenty feet in width, will doubtless be improved with a still higher class of dwellings. A row of superior three-story residences is nearly finished, on Front Street, within sight of the Hospital; and another lines the south side of the first wide street north of the Avenue. The Hospital is protected, by its elevation above the surrounding grade, from injurious crowding through any number of adjacent buildings; so that the only effect of this multiplication of houses, and paving of streets on every side, will be to change the scene, and destroy all traces of malaria, by filling up the former brick ponds and removing the unsightly aspect of the lately barren fields.

There is much to be hoped for in this final conversion, after years of transitional dreariness, of the country-seat in the green fields of twenty years ago into the popular Hospital, adorning with its towers and terraces a densely built district of the city of the current year. We sincerely trust that our yet youthful institution is not to be burdened, at this outset of its metropolitan career, with a tax that would prove a dead weight upon its public usefulness, and foreign to its purposes as a municipal servant. The debt, if it must be imposed upon us, is one which cannot occur again. It is one that marks a very material stage of a progress in which there is a great deal to be proud of and thankful for, and little to regret. Those who have already done so nobly to justify the pride and the thankfulness, will doubtless again protect us from regret. That they may have many new associates in the honor and the privilege, will be our earnest prayer.

The cost of maintaining the Hospital, in current expenses during the past twelve months, was $37,996 94, very nearly thirty-eight thousand dollars. Somewhat over five thousand dollars—$5135 60—were received from pay patients towards the liquidation of this account, but of course are not to be reckoned as defraying the whole amount of their cost. We may, at all events, estimate thirty-three thousand dollars ($33,000) over and above the pay-patient income, as the lowest probable expense of supporting the Hospital, on its present footing, until the end of 1871, without including repairs and other incidental extra needs.

For this outlay we have to depend on, 1st, the income of the present endowment fund; 2d, the Thanksgiving fund, which amounts to about ten thousand dollars ($10,000); 3d, the Free Bed fund, which varies from year to year; and 4th and lastly, the new and occasional contributions in various sums and forms, through which the Hospital has been, under a merciful Providence, so signally aided hitherto, and upon which our escape from deficit must always depend.

The permanent endowment fund has been increased by twenty-six thousand dollars since the date of the last Annual Report, and may now be rated at about two hundred and sixty thousand dollars ($260,000). With these data may be understood how far short is the whole sum of our definite resources, of the outlay required for all purposes in the proper support of a hospital of no more than a hundred beds,—even supposing it already finished in every detail of construction and furniture, as ours is not at the present date. A larger number of beds would not involve a corresponding increase of the whole expense, or of the necessary furniture. The additional cost, however, could be easily ascertained. The naked fact must never be forgotten that each of the one hundred patients, who are always in the wards, requires, for current expenses alone, the payment of one dollar ($1.00) a day—some part of which dollar must be made up by contributions entirely outside of the endowment fund, the thanksgiving collections, and the receipts for free beds and pay patients.

About six thousand dollars, ($6,000,) or a considerable portion of our annual outlay for every day expenses—including interest and wear and tear—must come, in order to prevent an annual deficit, through voluntary aid of which we have no actual promise. There is no reason for discouragement in this picture of uncertain prospects. We know that the stream of beneficence is sure to flow on in an ever swelling volume, as the channel widens and deepens; and we have no fear of the future, however unseen it is except in the faith which our experience, no less than our creed, has taught us.

We have to regret the resignation, on account of removal, of the Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks, and the Rev. Wm. H. Hare; and take pleasure in announcing the election of their successors, the Rev. Thomas A. Jaggar and the Rev. Dr. E. A. Hoffman.

Dr. Thompson, having resigned the office of attending physican, which he had acceptably filled during two years, Dr. Horatio C. Wood, Jr., was elected to his place. Dr. Horace Binney Hare, was then elected Assistant Physician, to succeed Dr. Wood on the Dispensary Staff. Dr. Hare was subsequently elected Attending Physician in place of Dr. Wood, resigned ; and Dr. Herbert Norris succeeded Dr. Hare as Assistant Physician.

In terminating the review of the events and movements of the year, the managers take pleasure in acknowledging the zeal and fidelity of the officers—resident and attending. They are under especial obligations to the recently organized Dispensary Staff, for the manner in which they have aided in establishing the change in this department upon a satisfactory basis.

Our cordial thanks are due also to the ladies of the Bishop A. Potter Memorial House, and to others engaged in the missionary work and the supervision of the nursing. For the record of these holy ministrations, we may refer to the report of the Chaplain, to which attention is asked for many interesting details of this important branch of our Hospital service.

A full statement of the medical and surgical cases will appear in the statistical tables and memoranda annexed to this report. In the same appendix may be found the report of the Treasurer, together with the accounts of the Superintendent, and a list of the contributions and donations, with the names of the donors.

Among the donations may be mentioned a prettily worked portable screen, which was presented to the Hannah Ward. It is so useful and so attractive in appearance, that the pleasant example set by its donor, might well be followed by others in a similar spirit of kindness and good taste.

In addressing our constituents for the nineteenth, or rather the twentieth time—including the original report, which was signed by several of the present Board—we have no desire to renew the discussion of themes so often dwelt upon in appeals for relief of which we are well known, to all possible readers, to be always in want. Little can be said without wearisome iteration upon the nature of the self-evident truth which enforces our demands. The boundless character of our Hospital charity, and the weight of the obligation to sustain its progress in every direction, must be patent beyond peradventure to all whom we can reach.

Intended to embody the purest, gentlest and broadest spirit of a Christian Church in its dealings with suffering humanity, it is devoted to the exercise and teaching, in its most intelligent and touching form, of the great lesson of peace and good will towards men. A missionary station of the highest class—a temple of unceasing worship, it is none the less an asylum for the sick and wounded, and a school for the advancement of the healing art.

The Hospital of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, however incomplete in building, endowment, arrangements and ultimate organization, has long been an accomplished enterprise. It is universally accepted, here, as an established and influential outgrowth of our Church, for the support of which the members of that Church are willing and bound to exert themselves, as they do for whatever else concerns her interest and standing.

As a hospital caring for the sick and wounded—without other distinction, as to sect and class alike, than the fact of need—it goes beyond our pale in commanding the esteem and securing the aid of the liberal of all denominations.

Relying on the strength of these manifest claims, and on the interest inseparable from the story of our ordinary course and recurring wants, we may safely leave the result to Him, who hath made us to differ. The most matter of fact picture of the opportunity here presented, is impressive enough to stir up the hearts of those servants of His, of every creed, who are ready to answer to their Saviour's bidding.

TO RT. REV. W. BACON STEVENS, D. D., BISHOP OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Rt. Rev. Sir:

The various services and ministrations for the benefit of the patients mentioned in my report for the year 1869, were continued for the year just passed.

At a service held in the Chapel on the evening of the 15th of December, three ladies were publicly admitted to the Sisterhood of the Bishop Potter Memorial House.

Ladies from the Memorial House continue their attendance in the wards, and are, as hitherto, assisted in their devout labors by several ladies, from the city, who statedly visit the Hospital.

The continued prosperity of the work in the Mission attached to the Hospital, is evidence of the Divine favor, and a proof of the great value of lay agency in the extension of the Gospel.

The first male Bible Class, which enrolls one hundred and fifty adults, has been deprived since April last of the personal instructions of its founder and teacher, and her return to her post is not looked for until the month of May next. She was withdrawn from this field of cherished labor, illustrated by her many virtues, in consequence of the illness of a near relative, and of the need of recruiting her own impaired strength. She was so happy as to obtain, for the period of her absence, the service of a lady from the Memorial House who admirably represents her.

The temporary teacher, by skillful instruction, prayerful and assiduous labor, has not only been able to hold together this interesting class, but to add to its numbers. It was the privilege of the chaplain, on behalf of the class, to present to this lady, during the Christmas season, a copy of Lange's Commentaries on the Scriptures, an appropriate gift made by the members as a grateful expression of the high and just value they placed upon her labors for their benefit.

Early in the summer Mr. Daudson resigned the position of Superintendent of the Mission Sunday School. Mr. Higginbotham, a member of the congregation, was appointed to the place. For several months he discharged its duties with assiduity and efficiency ; on his resignation he was succeeded by Mr. Eben. Thompson, a Student in the Divinity School. Mr. Thompson, in addition to superintending the Sunday School, conducts the Sunday service in the wards, which includes brief addresses to the patients. His labors are efficient and highly appreciated.

You will find below a table of parochial statistics.

Baptisms—Infants 71, Adults 7 ; 4 of them patients.

Confirmed—52 ; 8 of them patients.

Communicants—Added (new) 57 ; 11 of them patients.

Whole number, 149.

Infant Schools—1 ; Teachers, 2 ; Scholars, 250.

Bible Classes—Male, 5 ; Teachers, 5 ; attendants, 246. Female Classes, 4 ; Teachers, 4 ; attendants, 132.

Total number of attendants, 378.

Contributions to Religious and Charitable Objects—By the Bible Classes and Sunday Schools, $468.57 ; Collections made in the Chapel, $378.82 ; Total $847.39

Very Respectfully, &c.,

H. S. SPACKMAN.

JAN., 1871.

SPECIAL DONATIONS ARE RESPECT-FULLY SOLICITED.

- 1st. For Coal, of which several hundred tons are needed every year.
- 2d. For Books, for the General Library of the Hospital, for the use of the Patients.
- 3d. For the Library connected with the Medical Department.
- 4th. For the Museum and Pathological Cabinet, under the care of E. I. Santee, M.D., the Curator.

And as one of the Rubrics of the Book of Common Prayer directs that "men should often be put in remembrance to take order for the settling of their temporal estates whilst they are in health," I append the form of a devise or bequest to the Hospital, with the earnest hope that it may incite many to their duty, and find a place in the last wills and testament of those who desire that when "they may rest from their labors," their "work" may "follow them."

WM. BACON STEVENS,
PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD.
